New advisory service

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen, Dear Colleagues,

the Corona crisis has once again shown us how important each and every one of you is to the CAU. Your drive and your commitment are the key to our university's success.

At the same time, we are experiencing how challenging situations on a daily basis - regardless of whether these are at work or at home, in science or technology and administration, as an employee or a manager - make our everyday lives more difficult and can throw us off balance.

The University Board, together with the representation bodies, has therefore decided to offer an additional, free and anonymous advisory service which will support you in dealing with any type of personal or work-related challenge, and which should contribute to your well-being and your professional and private success.

This external service will be provided for the next 18 months by Corrente AG from Kiel. Corrente AG has been active throughout Germany since 2001 and advises employees from medium-sized companies through to global organisations - and you too, in future.

In addition to a telephone consultation service, you also have the option of a personal session on site. You can discuss any kind of work-related or private issues. A session in English is also possible upon request. The service is confidential, of course.

This offer is aimed at all CAU employees (professors and other civil servants, and salaried employees with a work contract at the CAU) as well as their direct family members in the same household. The CAU's advisory services that you are already aware of will remain in place and will be further developed independently of this new offer.

Please make use of this service and pass the information on to your colleagues. If you have any questions, the occupational health management team will be happy to help.

On behalf of the University Board, I send you my best wishes,
